B-CU Senior Grateful for Ideal Internship Opportunity

B-CU senior Jeremy Johnson is working hard and learning fast as a “Wyntern” with the Inventory Management department at the Wyndham Vacation Ownership corporate office in Orlando this summer.

Jeremy’s job is to assist with day-to-day activities during the busy summer travel season and work on projects that need to be completed in a timely manner while backing up staff members. Daily activities include assignments in both the inventory management and rental sales areas. Within the rental sales operation of Inventory Management, Jeremy researches rental market rates to help determine rates for 2012, prepares rate sheets and calendars, assists with preparation of vendor contracts and loads inventory on vendor extranet sites, such as Expedia.

“We believe our Wynternship program is an ideal introduction to the workplace, and the consistent positive feedback we receive from our Wynterns about our ‘Count On Me!’ culture supports that belief,” said Megan Rossi, Wyndham’s director of staffing. “Many of Wyndham Vacation Ownership’s associates have originated from this talent pipeline, and we have every expectation that many of this year’s Wynterns will ultimately become a permanent and valued part of our workforce.”

Wyndham has to offer and are allowing me to learn and gain so much experience that most students won’t have the opportunity to get. I express my thanks and gratitude to WVO.”

Johnson, who is a hospitality major in the B-CU School of Business, earned the opportunity through his employment with the Daytona Beach Wyndham Ocean Walk resort as a food and beverage associate and was granted the opportunity to transfer to the corporate office in Orlando for the summer.

“This opportunity has allowed me to meet some of the key people within the Wyndham family,” notes Johnson. “These people are the best that
New Program Designed to Enhance Campus Safety

The B-CU Office of Safety and Security has a new program to enhance safety on campus. Members of the campus community and beyond may now submit an anonymous tip online. If you know of a crime or wish to report suspicious activity, you can submit information anonymously by completing and submitting the following form.

“We are hopeful that this new online anonymous tips link will be an effective investigative tool, that will help us maintain a safe and secure university community. We believe that it will play a vital role in helping our investigations by providing us with detailed information from anonymous sources,” said Chief Melvin Williams, director of the Office of Safety and Security. “Incoming tips will be received, via email, by campus safety administrators allowing for immediate evaluation and response to those tips.”

Cheryl Lawson-Young, B-CU’s crime prevention practitioner believes that by allowing these tips to be submitted anonymously, those who might otherwise withhold information will step forward.

“Perhaps the element of anonymity will motivate individuals to report suspicious or unusual activity, which might otherwise go unreported or be perceived as ‘snitching,’” she said. “The website even allows the user to answer questions about the type of crime, time, date and location, descriptions of suspects and individuals, and provide additional sources for information or contacts.”

Anyone who has information can submit online tips at www.cookman.edu/campuslife/studaftrs/security/crimetip.html.

The anonymous tips link is not to be used for reporting crimes in progress or emergencies and should not be used to file formal campus incidents or police reports. Immediate threats, such as a crime in progress or a person that is acting in a manner that is threatening to themselves or to others, should be reported right away to the Office of Safety and Security by calling extension 2900 from any campus telephone or 386-481-2900 from any telephone. Callers will not be required to provide their name.
